Changing Roles and Responsibilities in Trade Practice

Approved for 2.5 CCS/CES Credits

This workshop will provide a distinct viewpoint of the evolution of the Customs Broker and the Freight Forwarder to what it is today from a regulatory and/or in-house perspective. We shall explore the ever-changing role and responsibilities of these trade representatives and what that will entail in the modern world of corporate governance, regulatory compliance, and potential agency enforcement. Using real-world case studies, we will review significant FDA and intellectual property issues faced by importers. Additionally, we will discuss recent trends in the trade industry and what industry may be able to expect from various regulatory agencies that affect trade.

The workshop will cover the following topics:

- Customs - Will the appointment of Kevin McAllenan as the Commissioner of Customs help push President Trump's "Two for One" Executive Order on regulations and the administration's enforcement policies for Customs as a taxing agency?
- TSA - What is the potential role of the TSA under the Administration's security vision and proposed budget that will affect the cargo industry, such as freight forwards and indirect air carriers?
- FAA - The transition from compliance to enforcement and back again.
- Agriculture - Will the ACE system pick up on the missing supporting documentation to detect patterns?
- FDA - FSVP Inspections, Common FDA nightmares and how to avert.
- Intellectual Property at the Port - CBP IPR, Trademark, Grey Market defense, TM Monitoring, Litigation
